Dublin 8 is well served by public transport and is a close walking distance to the city centre.

As a result I believe that this site would be much better utilised for high density housing, green spaces and social amenities.

A super depot and the resulting increase in industrial traffic is wholly unsuited to a largely residential area. I feel industrial vehicles operating at anti-social hours is detrimental to the quality of life of residents.

This area is also adjacent to Dublin's most popular tourist attraction with huge numbers of tourist pedestrians. A super depot would not only be a visual black spot it could also prove to be unsafe for these pedestrians.
